

JANA JACOB

is a painter based in Berlin. Her current oil painting shows a mixture of self-portrayal, latent exhibitionism and voyeurism. Increasingly saturated colours, juicy and coarse brushstrokes reveal the interplay between the partly inaccessibly intimate and still shamefaced, hesitant desire to show oneself. The often excerpts of human of human body parts, create their own symmetry. They become scenic elevations, ravines, caves and tell out of context their own stories. The space around the figure dissolves or gives way lurid colours. The partially indiscreet perspective on seemingly private situations, is intended to a contradictory intimacy and confrontation with the person enable.
